INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE

Over half a millennium people from Waterford (and the South-East) have made their mark in their adoptive homelands from Salamanca to St John's, Newfoundland, and from Malaga to Mazulipatam. In turn Waterfordians today are a huge mix of Viking, Norman, Gaelic Irish and more recent immigrants from near and far. Come along to hear international experts from Newfoundland, New York, Spain, France, Italy, Scotland and Ireland share their researches into Waterford's international connections with England, Europe and the Americas, the East Indies, the Caribbean and Asia.

Networks of the Aylward, Butler, Carew, FitzGerald, Gough, Lee, Quilty, Sherlock, Porter, Walsh, White and other families criss-crossed from Waterford to Tenerife, France and London, operating across political boundaries and achieving local importance in quite unexpected places. These were highly mobile and culturally adaptable people. The conference will present the researches of the last forty years, spearheaded by Waterford's Julian Walton in the 1970s and 1980s.

It is hoped that the conference will incubate plans for future transnational research as well as highlight the existence of several little-known but very promising archival sources outside Ireland.

The conference includes a guided tour of the museum displays of objects connected to some of these remarkable people.
